Good morning

We have sought advice from the relevant officers and they have responded as follows

“The draft Development Assessment Regulations and the Accredited Professional Regulations propose levels of building authorities that achieve consistency with the national AIBS accreditation scheme. This means that the scope of authority for a Level 3 building surveyor is different from the current Development Regulations 2008.

That being said, the draft Accredited Professionals Regulations seek to provide the Accreditation Authority with discretion in their assessment of each individual’s application. This may allow for the existing experience of individuals and local needs to be assessed on a case-by-case basis, especially in regional areas where there may be a shortage of persons who are suitably qualified to fulfil statutory roles. Following this assessment, an individual may receive a conditioned accreditation, at the Authority’s discretion. (These arrangements are subject to Cabinet approval and will be confirmed once approved – keep an eye on the SA planning portal for further updates.)”

Hi

Just trying to read through the documents but it very confusing.

I’m currently a Level 3 building surveyor at council. At present I can assess 1 and 10a and also single story up to 500m2 single story. With the new changes coming into force will this now mean that I’m only allowed to assess class 1 10a?

Are there any provisions under the act that still allows me to assess class 2-9 under 500m2?

If not what process or concessions are DPTI making for officers such as me particularly where I’m the only building surveyor at Council as this will have a massive impact on timeframes and costs to council.

Or am I reading this all wrong?
