All remaining native vegetation must be left growing and more areas replanted. We are down to a mere 3% native vegetation across all areas and most of this is along roadsides. The effect on our wildlife has been devastating and we are fast losing species of all types. It is time to consider the future viability of this land. Native vegetation must be regarded as precious and untouchable. It has to be placed above all other considerations and all planning has to work around it. No longer can human activity be considered premier but secondary. Heavy penalties need to be enforced to save what remains of our native forests and bush lands.
