The haste with which this code is being pushed through is of concern. Because it is a major generational change, the wider community must be extensively informed and allowed to comment. There are many in the community who either were not aware that the implications are so very wide reaching as you potentially affect their amenity and enjoyment of their homes. The clunkiness of the on line program has not allowed, and has in fact discouraged, adequate scrutiny. We are informed that there are errors in the code. Of concern also is the inadequate protection from inbridled development in both our suburbs and in our rural and national parks. The right to comment and protest at unsuitable development must be protected. Ending the consultation period while acknowledging that the introduction and understanding of the code will take longer is ridiculous. It has not engendered trust in our politicians.
