Dear Minister Knoll,

As a builder and long time Adelaide resident I am worried about the future of our city.

We can't allow it to become ordinary. We can't seek out short term revenue opportunities at the expense of the lifestyle we pride ourselves on. Nobody can make such huge changes to the code alone and nor should they have to. In fact, a communal, group effort with input from all facets of life will generate the best weighted options.

I am asking you to please consider adding an extra round of public consultation to the Planning and Design Code so that once you've released the final version we can take another look.

Kind regards,

Thomas Giles
